

Common Ambition Bristol

Improving sexual health

Help improve HIV and sexual health services for people of African and Caribbean heritage in Bristol

Common Ambition Bristol is a major new project with people of African and Caribbean heritage working in partnership with health care professionals to improve HIV testing and awareness and reduce HIV stigma in Bristol. More information about the project can be found at www.brigstowe.org/common-ambition-bristol/

Did you know?

People living with HIV...

Can have a normal life span

Those who are on HIV medication, can't pass the virus on to sexual partners

People of African and Caribbean heritage...

Have a higher prevalence of HIV – it is more common than for other communities (especially for Black African women)

Are more likely to be diagnosed late with HIV which can result in a greater chance of being hospitalised, reduced life expectancy

Are less likely to access sexual health services than other people

We want to make things better. We've got some ideas but we want to know what YOU think of them.
